A mosaic begins as an image in an artist's imagination. His experience, his creativity, his craftsmanship are embodied in his art. Overcoming the frustrations of his imperfections, he strives to create a work of art in which the tiny bits of color, beautiful in themselves, fit together to form the finished piece.

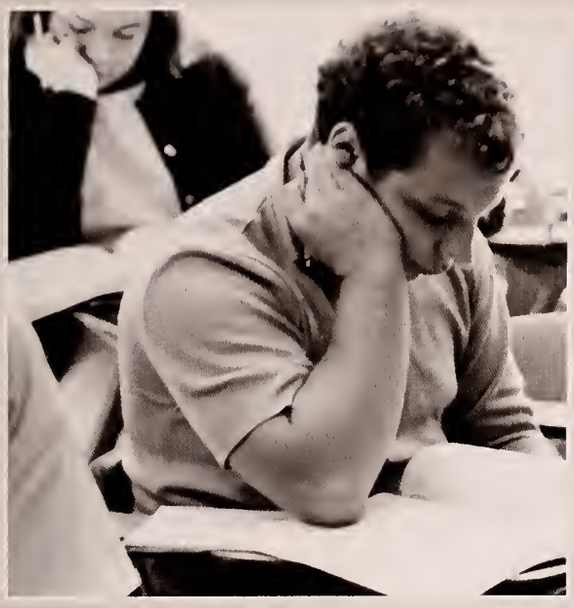

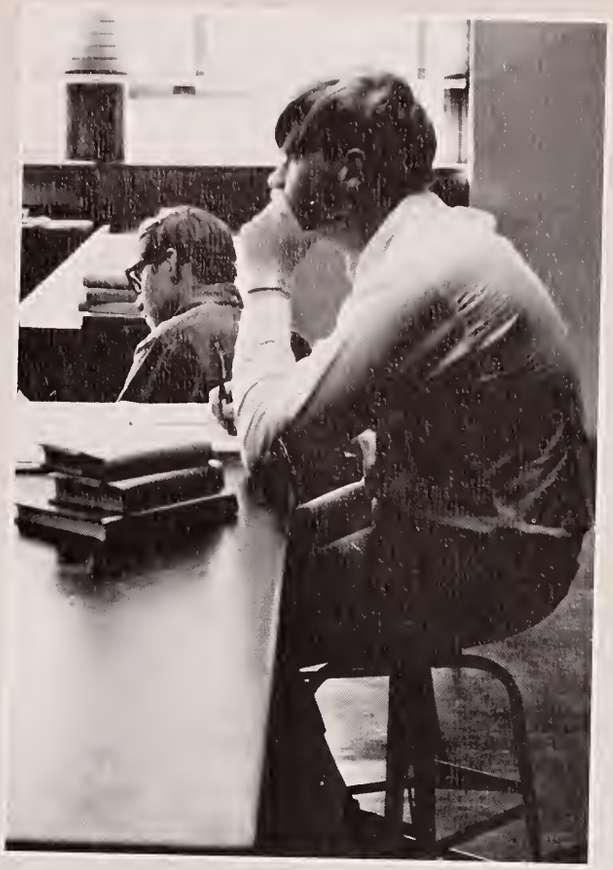

Our class is like a mosaic, with each of us an artist contributing his personality, his ideas, as well as his ideals . . .

We found friends to share our dreams . . .

And as an artist gains more inspiration the harder he works . . .

so we, in spite of momentary defeats, began to find spirit in ourselves . . .

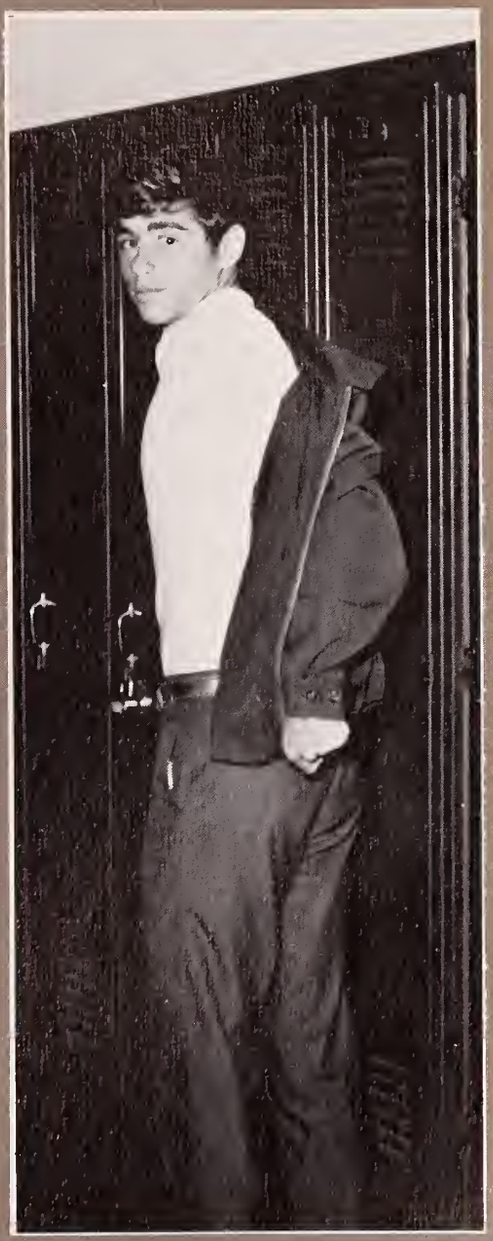

The artist chooses to emphasize a certain feature of his mosaic . . .

just as we have elected our leaders to encourage the best from our class . . .

The artist stands back in admiration . . .

And the final effect of his work is of individual pieces coming together to form a unified whole, as we have come together to create the mosaic that is our class.

Dr. Robert H. McCarn
Superintendent Of Schools

With confidence in the young people of Fitchburg, Dr. Robert H. McCarn continues to display genuine enthusiasm for our future, concern for our problems, and respect for our achievements. Responsibly aware of educational and cultural changes within the city and the state, he takes an active part in our curriculum and activities. His attendance at assemblies and in our classrooms, his guidance as production consultant in our musicals, and his recognition of our accomplishments demonstrate his dedication to us. By his trust and support he encourages us to do our best.

Business Requires Intensive Training

Today the business community is expanding faster and faster as increasingly newer methods of business administration, technology, and salesmanship are being employed. These sophisticated techniques require well-educated and skilled personnel to use them to the greatest advantage, so that business, a vital element in our industrial society, may fulfill its economic potential.

To meet this need, we turn to our schools. Inspiring interest and providing a solid education in the fundamental concepts and constantly improved methods, schools must continue to satisfy the requirements of the business world our generation will be directing. Then, as international trade becomes freer and freer, there may be no limit to the business opportunities today's graduates will enjoy in the future.

English Inspires Humanistic Spirit

A human being is more than just an intricate arrangement of flesh, blood, and nerves that moves and talks, lives and dies; more than just a mammal with a life history of good times and bad, a past and a future; more than just one tiny speck on a heavy planet of over three billion people. A human being is an entity possessing emotion, curiosity, intelligence, integrity, and a sense of ethics—an entity who thinks.

As young adults, it is in school that we have the greatest opportunity to develop these qualities to the fullest potential. Besides teaching us the essentials of grammar so that we may better communicate with our fellowmen, our English instructors expose us to the best literature from mankind's history. In a sense, their basic function is to make us more complete human beings by encouraging us to appreciate the ethical lessons in literary masterpieces, in addition to making us aware of the "why" and the "how" of life in our society and how we may react to future crises. The aim is not to produce great philosophers or intellectuals but to show us how to comprehend ourselves as individuals and to understand our hearts and minds and develop them to their highest point for greatness, for nobility—for humanity.

Language Studies Encourage World Unity

Diversity in customs and ideals has long been an obstacle to international unity. With expanding communication systems, however, international involvement has become a reality. Opportunities for travel have acquainted our citizens with many other countries and enriched their knowledge of foreign cultures. Through an understanding of the languages and customs of others, we can more fully appreciate the development of our own heritage.

As we strive for world unity, we must continue our study of foreign languages, for only through an exchange of ideas can we join one world effort for peace and prosperity.

Teaching requires great physical endurance.

Guidance Offers Plans For The Future

Expanded educational opportunities have opened millions of new jobs to today's youth. With the easier availability of a college education or of many kinds of vocational training, an individual finds many more vocational opportunities within his reach than he would have found fifty or even twenty years ago. In addition to the number and variety of jobs today, the employment situation is made more complex as some jobs become obsolete while other jobs come more into demand. Because of this complexity, vocational and college guidance has become a necessity.

High-school guidance departments are using techniques employed by professional job-counseling services to advise those seeking careers. Equipped with data on employment trends, guidance specialists, after testing an individual for special interests and attitudes, can suggest appropriate educational and vocational programs. Thus, with the benefit of excellent guidance, students entering the work world or higher institutions of learning can satisfy their personal need for fulfillment and eventually contribute most effectively to society.

Knowledge Gained Through Literature

All the known world is influenced by books. A wide knowledge in many areas is essential in today's rapidly changing world. The opportunity to read and gain knowledge is at our fingertips, if we will take advantage of it. The library provides an extensive range of information in a vast number of subjects from which students can build a foundation to project the ideals and beliefs of a new generation. It is our duty to learn literature so that we can guide our future actions and insure a world of peace.

Mathematics — The Foundation For Modern Research

Numbers, specific, and systematic, form the intricate and ever-broadening study of mathematics. As an understanding of our number system and its applications increases, we become better equipped to probe our universe, for every aspect of science is based upon the fundamentals of mathematics. Scientists, now specializing in specific areas of their field, are exploring each mystery more and more meticulously and are continually relying on mathematical principles. Through this unity we have realized the possibility of space exploration and carried out tremendous experiments successfully.

Yet, in the field of mathematics loom many obscurities. Only through concentrated study can we eliminate these obscurities and pave the way to even greater knowledge. With a solid understanding of the mechanics of mathematics, we are prepared to accept that challenge and to contribute to the progression of mathematical research.

I.A. Encourages Pride And Creativity

Behind the simple physical representations of the Industrial Arts Department (the violent steel saws in the noisy carpentry shop, the air of quiet creativity in the arts-and-crafts room) there is an idea that the instructors are trying to transmit to their students—pride in manual skill. Men who can handle tools with ability and who can instill their imaginations in the work of their hands are rare and valuable in a world too dependent on pushbutton machines. The individual who can feel the satisfaction and great pride resulting from knowledge of manual arts and the skill to put that knowledge to a constructive use has something that very few people today possess—a mature responsibility and the ability to meet the challenge of a rushing, complex society.

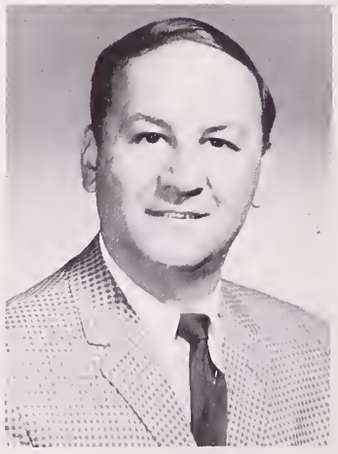

It is this responsibility that will send students out into society more confident. Whether they pursue careers in the technological fields or not, they will have a good start for success and personal satisfaction.

Today's Society Seeks Physical Fitness

In an age which is steadily decreasing the necessity for strenuous exercise in transportation, jobs, and other facets of daily life, we must apply increasingly more conscious effort to maintain physical fitness. Today, the first requirement is that we educate ourselves on what is needed for better physical health. In fulfilling this need, our schools, with the help of a national council on physical fitness, are striving not only to educate youth concerning the requirements for better health and physical condition, but also to train youth in healthful habits of exercise and co-ordination.

Learning at an early age how enjoyable exercise can be in sports such as basketball, skating, volleyball, swimming, or tennis, an individual will be more apt to continue a program of exercise as he grows older. Thus, we are taking the first step towards lasting physical fitness—a necessity if we are to gain the fullest benefits from our modern, automated society.

Science Shapes Society

The "futuristic" era of ease and marvel foreseen by many science fiction writers is fast approaching reality in relation to our rapidly expanding technology. Science courses all over the United States similar to those at Fitchburg High School are designed to stimulate and educate those envisioning young people who will shape the environment of tomorrow.

One of the most fascinating and promising fields to be developed is that of atomic energy. X-ray machines used for treating cancer, for discovering the location of blood clots, or for determining the extent of damaged bones are but a singular example of the use of atomic rays. Furnaces fueled by atomic transformations can be used to create electricity and to purify water for consumption. Plastics treated atomically can be made to achieve whatever qualities desirable. Atomic energy will most probably propel the first interplanetary space flight. So long as individuals of education, imagination, and courage are available, the list of uses for atomic energy is unending.

Social Science Examines Cultural Growth

We are involved in a Renaissance—a reawakening to the ideals and principles formerly rejected but recently considered by society. People are rising in rebellion today, crying out for recognition of their beliefs. We are caught in this whirlwind of protest, and only we can take the necessary action to calm it.

Perhaps this revolt is the key to many of our problems. Perhaps it is only intensifying them and creating new difficulties. We must make our decision and reorganize our society, but first we must be capable of accepting responsibility.

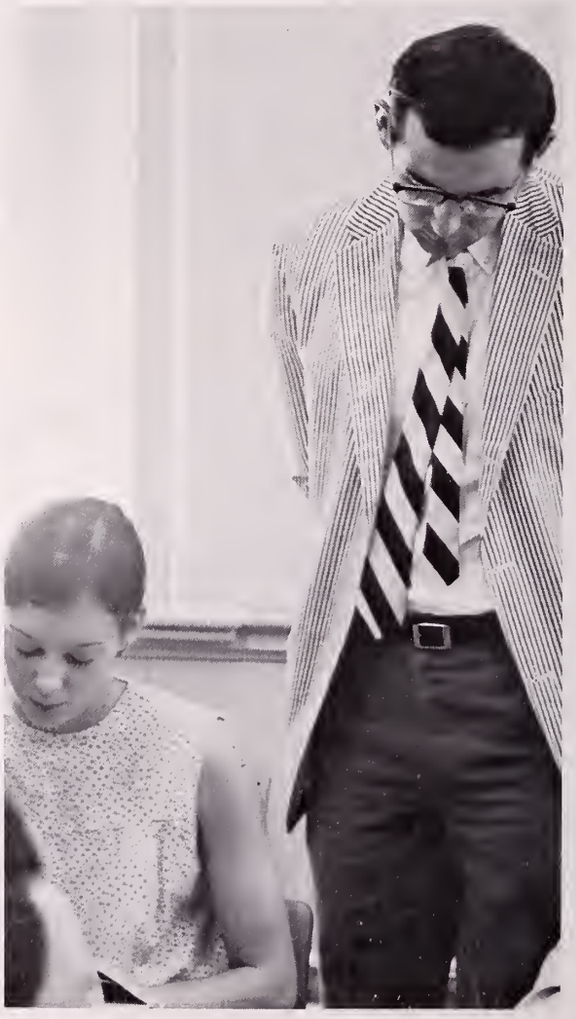

Each generation has faced turmoil and employed a variety of suggestions in search of a solution. Let us make a foundation of our ancestors' experience and build upon this foundation a rostrum from which we may project a new hope for peace and security.

Vocational Skills Demanded For Progress

Little more than ten years ago, the only evidence of manned or even unmanned space flights could be found in science fiction books. Yet now, there is a distinct possibility that our graduation year, 1969, will see American men landing on the moon! If we have advanced this far technologically in only ten years, imagine what we may see within the next fifty years! The awesome space spectacles which we have already witnessed represented the efforts of thousands of men, each proficient in the skills of his job.

Regarding our future, which is approaching deceptively fast, we realize that a major challenge of our time will be to fulfill the increasing demand for individuals highly skilled in using and developing the technology of their chosen fields. As technology and specialization increase, however, we must take greater care to provide for the intellectual and cultural needs of our workmen and specialists. With these challenges met, we can only guess at the technological feats which will be made possible by the vocational skills of our generation.

The "Red and Gray" is the most important joint effort of our student body. By contributing material for publication, by working on the various staffs to produce an appealing, meaningful magazine three times a year, or simply by buying copies, the students of the different classes not only grow a little closer as a single group but create a representation of our school that expresses the best that is in us, what concerns us, what we do, and how we do it. The "Red and Gray" encourages the writers among us to print their works, the artists to exhibit their drawings, and students in general to express their opinions or introduce themselves to their classmates through the Personals column. It permits us to know each other and our school better.

The members of the various staffs derive the greatest benefit. Our creative imaginations, ingenuity, and just plain hard work result in something of which we can be justly proud. Our adventures in last minute rushes for advertising and for material, the sore spots and the triumphs, the anticipation with which we open each issue—all this experience in journalism, we will not forget.

The "Red and Gray" Editor and Assistant Editor consult with their advisors, Mrs. Masse and Miss Ruberti.

Football 1968

Prior to capturing the North Worcester County Championship, the Fitchburg High Squad had suffered only one heartbreaking but questionable defeat at the hands of a "fifteenman" team in Nashua. Coach of the Year, Mario Landino, provided a determined outlook which gave the boys extra drive. Both offensively and defensively, with the expert advice and great understanding of Coach Crank, the linemen developed into tough and most aggressive opponents. Capitalizing on the strong line, the backfield under Coach Conway, became superior in ball control and scoring potential. Unfortunately, two potential wins, Notre Dame and Worcester South, were canceled, but the team still managed a 6-1 season. Drastic changes had to be made due to the early season injuries of Dave Rheaume, Leo LaRoche, Tom DiGeronimo, and John Arminio. Since we had not beaten Leominster in three years, the Raiders went into the Thanksgiving Game with pride and determination. Fitchburg dominated most of the game with an offense which tallied sixteen points and a defense that held Leominster to only fourteen points.

Cross Country

Under the excellent coaching of Mr. Erkki Koutonen, the Red and Gray harriers rolled to an impressive 7-1 season. The climax of the season came when Fitchburg's team nipped Keene, N.H., last year's runner-up in the New England Championship. Victories were tallied over Narragansett, Nashua, Notre Dame, Leominster, and St. Bernard's. For the tenth straight year the Red and Gray won the Lunenburg Invitational.

With the excellent coaching of Mr. Koutonen was coupled the fine running ability of "Jake" Ward and Steve Thibault. Because of this combination, our runners were able to capture places in the Knights of Columbus, the Wachusett Invitational, the District III's, and the N.C.M.C. conference meets. These two boys also scored in the state meet in Boston. With some fine underclassmen returning next year, Coach Koutonen is looking forward to another successful season.

Swimming

New head Coach Vince Herring began the '68-'69 season with a successful outlook and a promising team. Although there were a number of star swimmers, the Raiders definitely lacked depth. They were always able to tally a good number of points in a meet, but they never had enough back-up strength. Co-Captains Steve Holt and Rick Haudel showed excellent form when they broke seven long-standing individual records. Along with the fine swimming abilities of the entire squad, Fitchburg was lucky to find Vince Herring after losing a tremendous coach in Mr. Christie.

Basketball

With the competent coaching of a dedicated Ted Paulauskas and the reliable performance of the entire bench, the Raiders were able to build a squad based on team effort. Through a well-executed attack F.H.S. dealt St. Peter's a resounding blow to enliven our spirit. In a mid-season clash we overpowered the mistakenly rated No. 1 St. Bernard's 81-58. Many times we were at a definite height disadvantage but by determined practice and spirited play the basketball team played characteristically superior ball.

Hockey Team

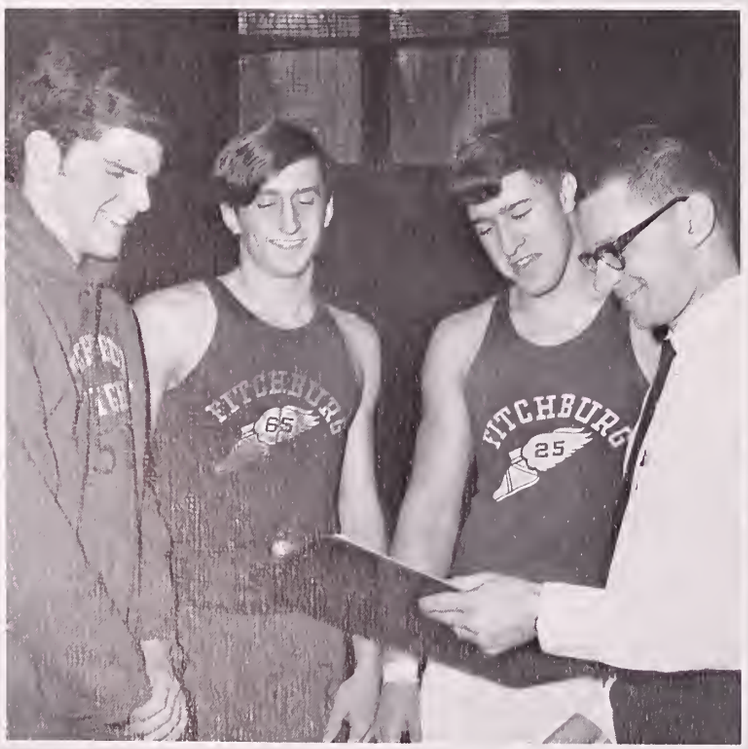

This season the hockey team found itself facing one of the toughest schedules in recent years. Although the squad was small and inexperienced, they played well against more skillful and more experienced opponents such as Manchester Central, Nashua, and Cushing Academy. Aggressive and determined, the members of the team maintained high spirits and enthusiasm for each game. In spite of the season's record, the boys never lacked pride in themselves.

Indoor Track

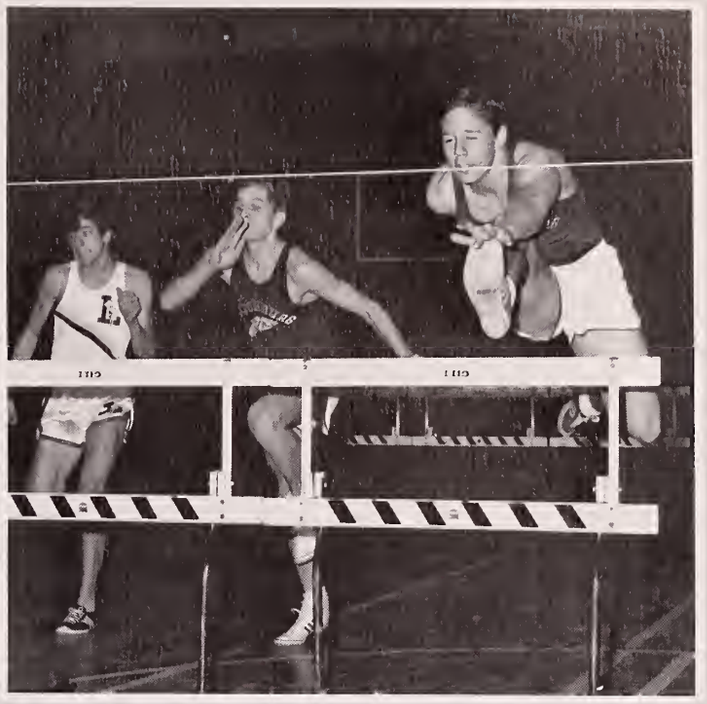

The Indoor Track Team has performed convincingly well throughout the year, scoring easily in all dual meets. We registered solid victories over Leominster, Worcester North, Marlborough, and St. John's, losing only to a fine Worcester Doherty Club.

Essentially, our success was accomplished by the dedicated efforts of a unified team. Highlights of the season were the achievements of Leo LaRoche and John Osborne. Leo captured first place in the shot put at the All State meet with a heave of 53' 2¼" John, who developed the high jumping form of Dick Fosbury, broke the school record with a jump of 5' 10"

With the return of many promising trackmen, Coach Gastonguay is hopeful of another rewarding season.

Girls' Sports

The many teams of sophomores, juniors, and seniors which register for intramural competition prove the great enthusiasm for active participation in sports. Officiating and scoring their own contests, girls have the opportunity to become familiar with every aspect of the game. Although spirit and determination increase as the end of the season approaches, a feeling of good sportsmanship is always present.

Two energetic females compete for Miss Grasshopper of the Month.

Volleyball and Basketball Champions, "The Interludes"; First Row: D. Louney, P. Putis, E. Cormier, S. LeBlanc, D. Pochini. Second Row: S. Haimila, N. McCune, D. Girouard, J. Vaillancourt, J. Addorisio.

ACTIVITIES

The quaint Alpine village . . . snow-capped mountains . . . galaxy of snowflakes and picturesque shops . . .

... the enchanting world of Edelweiss ... and the truly Grand March which made our charming Junior Prom a memorable evening.

Autographed sweatshirts . . . our blue and green decorations . . . pregame butterflies . . .

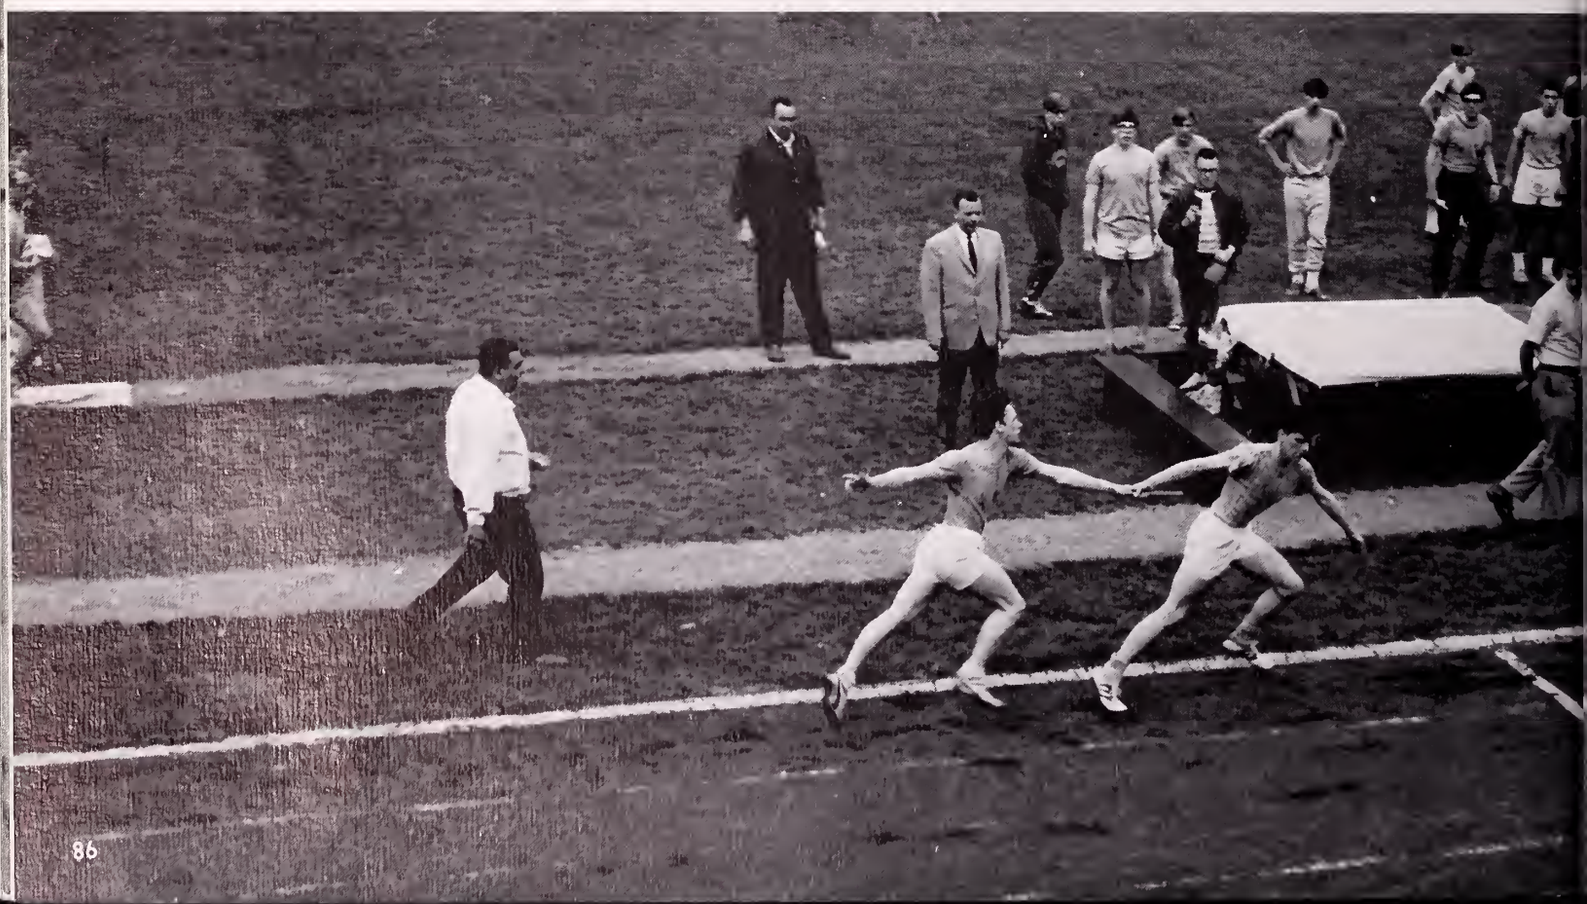

... the jump and effective ball-handling ... intense efforts of our teams reflected the proud spirit of '69.

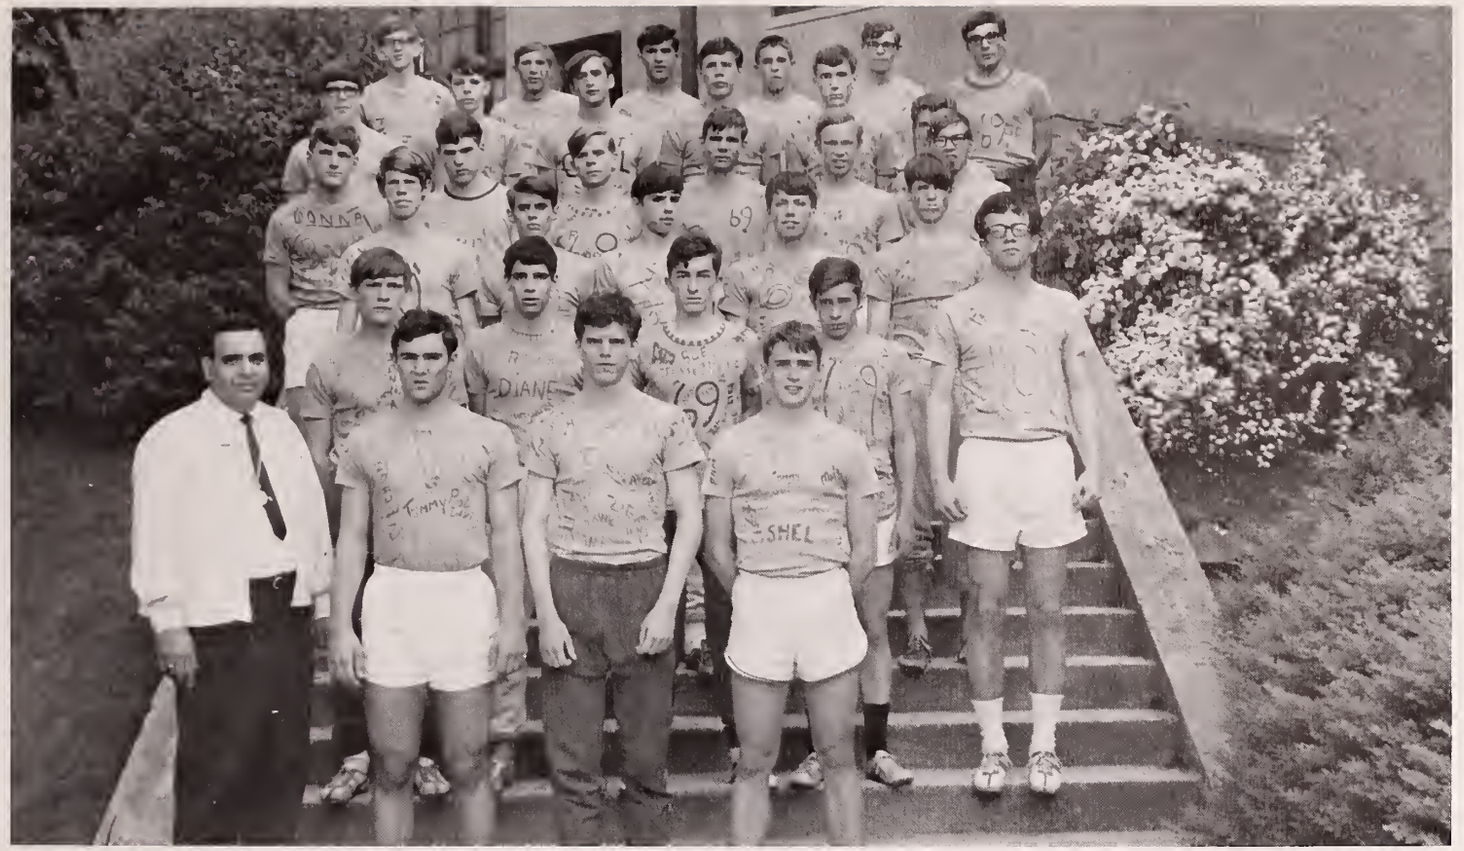

Last minute decorations at Crocker Field . . . the tension packed start . . . overwhelming enthusiasm in the stands . . . renewed expectation with every lap . . .

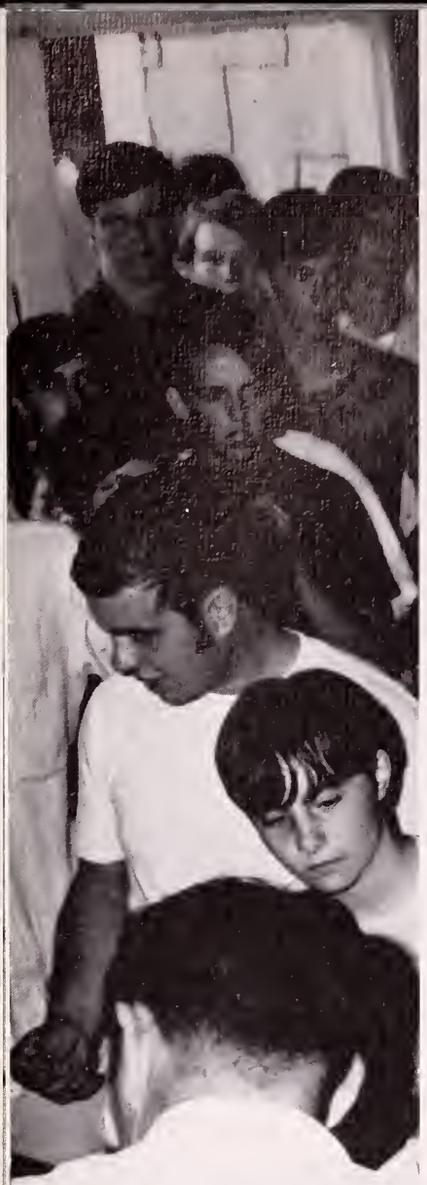

Row 1: Mr. Romano, T. DiGeronimo, B. Ward, T. McNamara. Row 2: B. Damien, K. Hughes, S. Thibeault, C. Silveroli, S. Enright. Row 3: J. Caves, D. Descoteaux, D. Flynn, M. Johnson, D. Buckley. Row 4: G. Ares, D. McConnville, J. Goguen, M. Spano, T. Jarko, R. Huhtala. Row 5: R. Stocking, J. Guercio, G. Stevens, J. Bourque, T. St. Pierre, M. Richard. Row 6: D. Kane, H. Boucher, D. Gauvin, T. Pelletier, J. Bacon, J. Quatrale.

. . . but disappointed juniors watch seniors pull ahead to the finish.

A warm September afternoon . . . relaxation with good eating and spirited activity . . . easy conversation our first senior function found students and teachers enjoying the convivial atmosphere of the Senior Reception.

The streamers are fastened . . . the bandstand receives the final touches . . .
and our Thanksgiving Dance begins with a warm welcome for all . . .

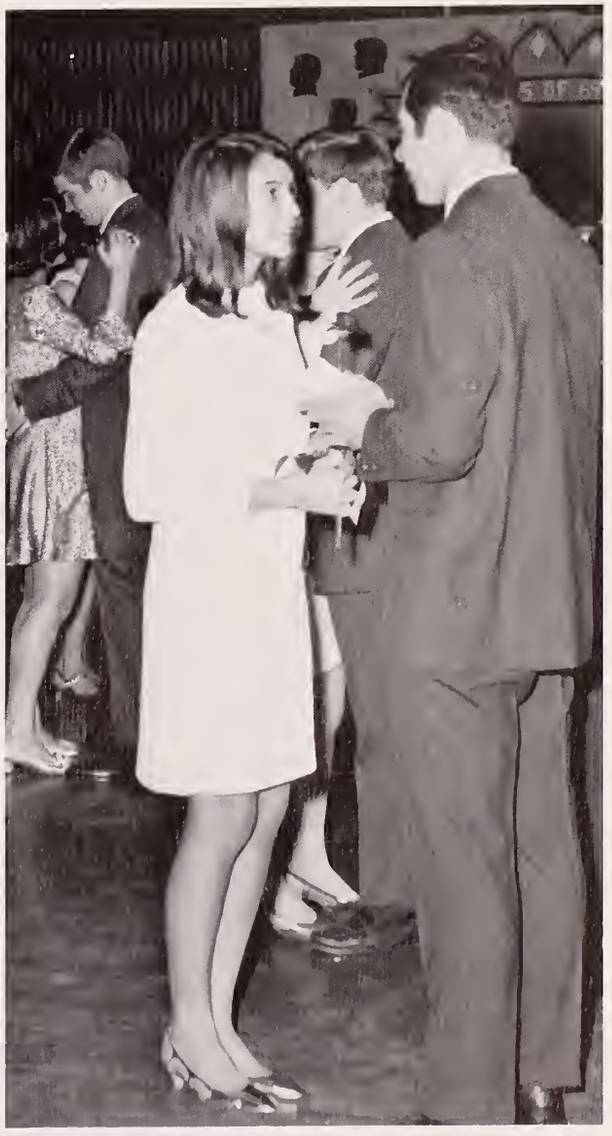

. . . Happy fans and our victorious football team celebrate an exciting day.

Nervous excitement . . . "Quiet backstage!" . . . curtain . . .
As sophomores we found a new world on the stage . . .

Challenging competition claims first honors in the Junior Production of "Stolen Identity," while outstanding individual performances in the Senior production of "A Young Lady of Property" completed our success in interclass dramatic competition.

SENIORS

MONA HACHEY, Vice-President

CHRIS PETRIDES, Treasurer

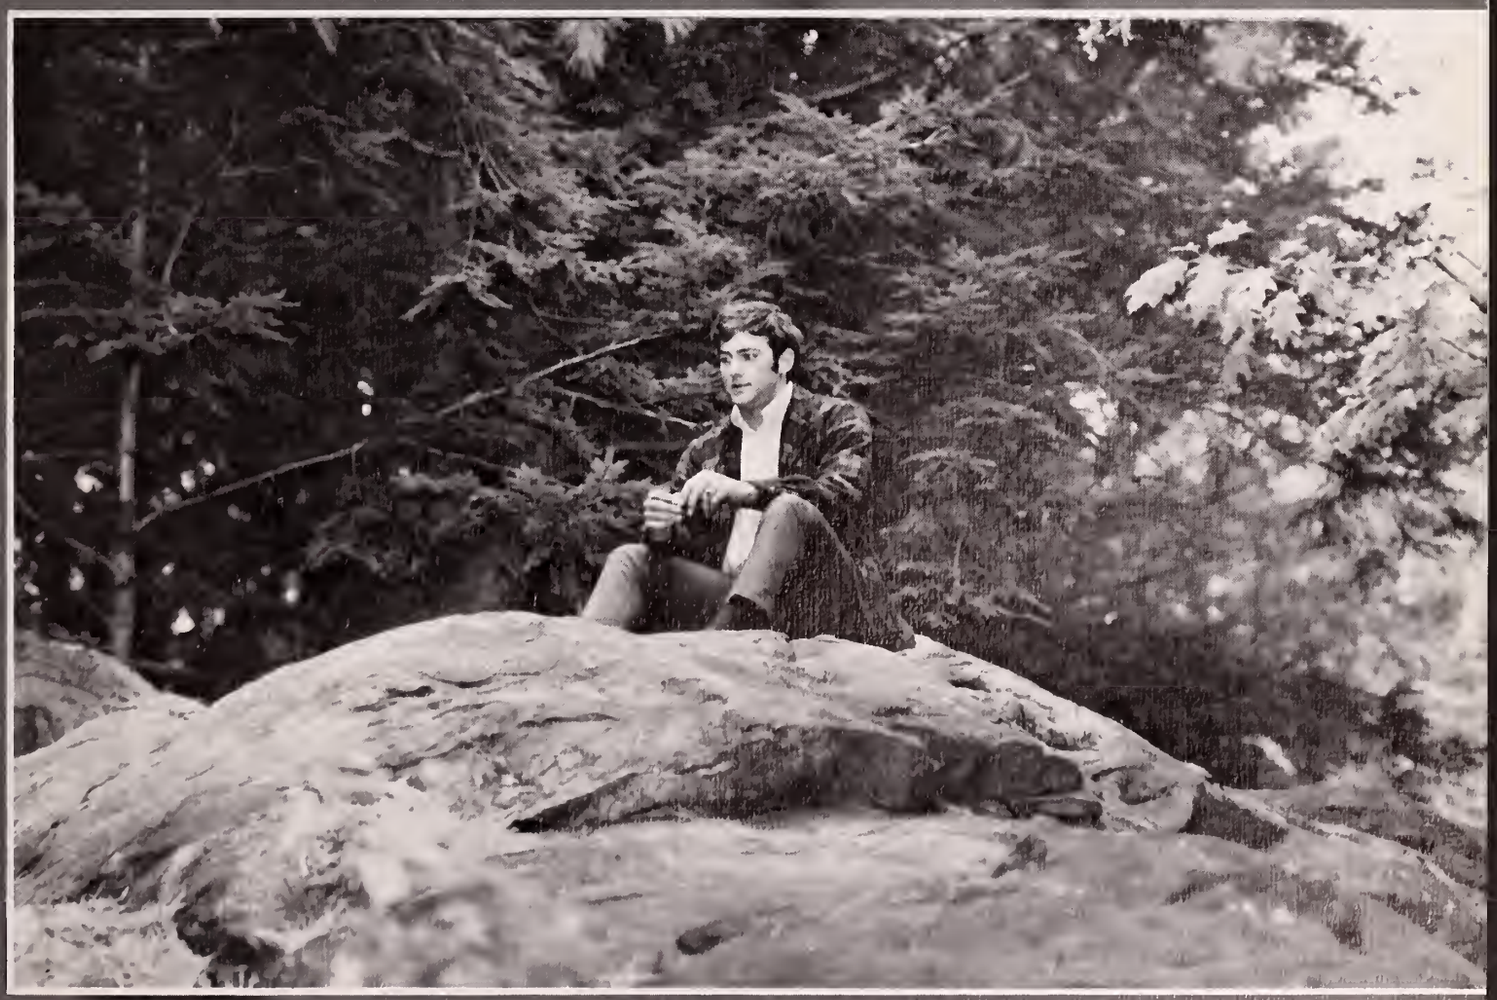

MARSHA BENNETT, Secretary

To the Class of '69:

As the one hundred and third graduating class of Fitchburg High School, we look back upon our high school days with many memories that we will cherish always. Freshman year we were undefeated in every athletic contest and also had a greater percentage of honor roll students than any other class. As Juniors we won all three awards in the Competitive Plays and had a very beautiful and original Junior Prom. Our fabulous spirited Thanksgiving Rally and our victory against Leominster in our Senior year we will always remember. Yet now there is the sorrow of knowing that these wonderful times have come to an end.

Looking to the future we realize our greater responsibility as members of our community and the new challenges and problems that we shall encounter. As your class president, I thank all of you for your cooperation, friendship, support, and effort in making our class one of the best ever. In whatever field you enter I sincerely hope you reach your ultimate goal and that you will find happiness in the future.

Frederick Collins

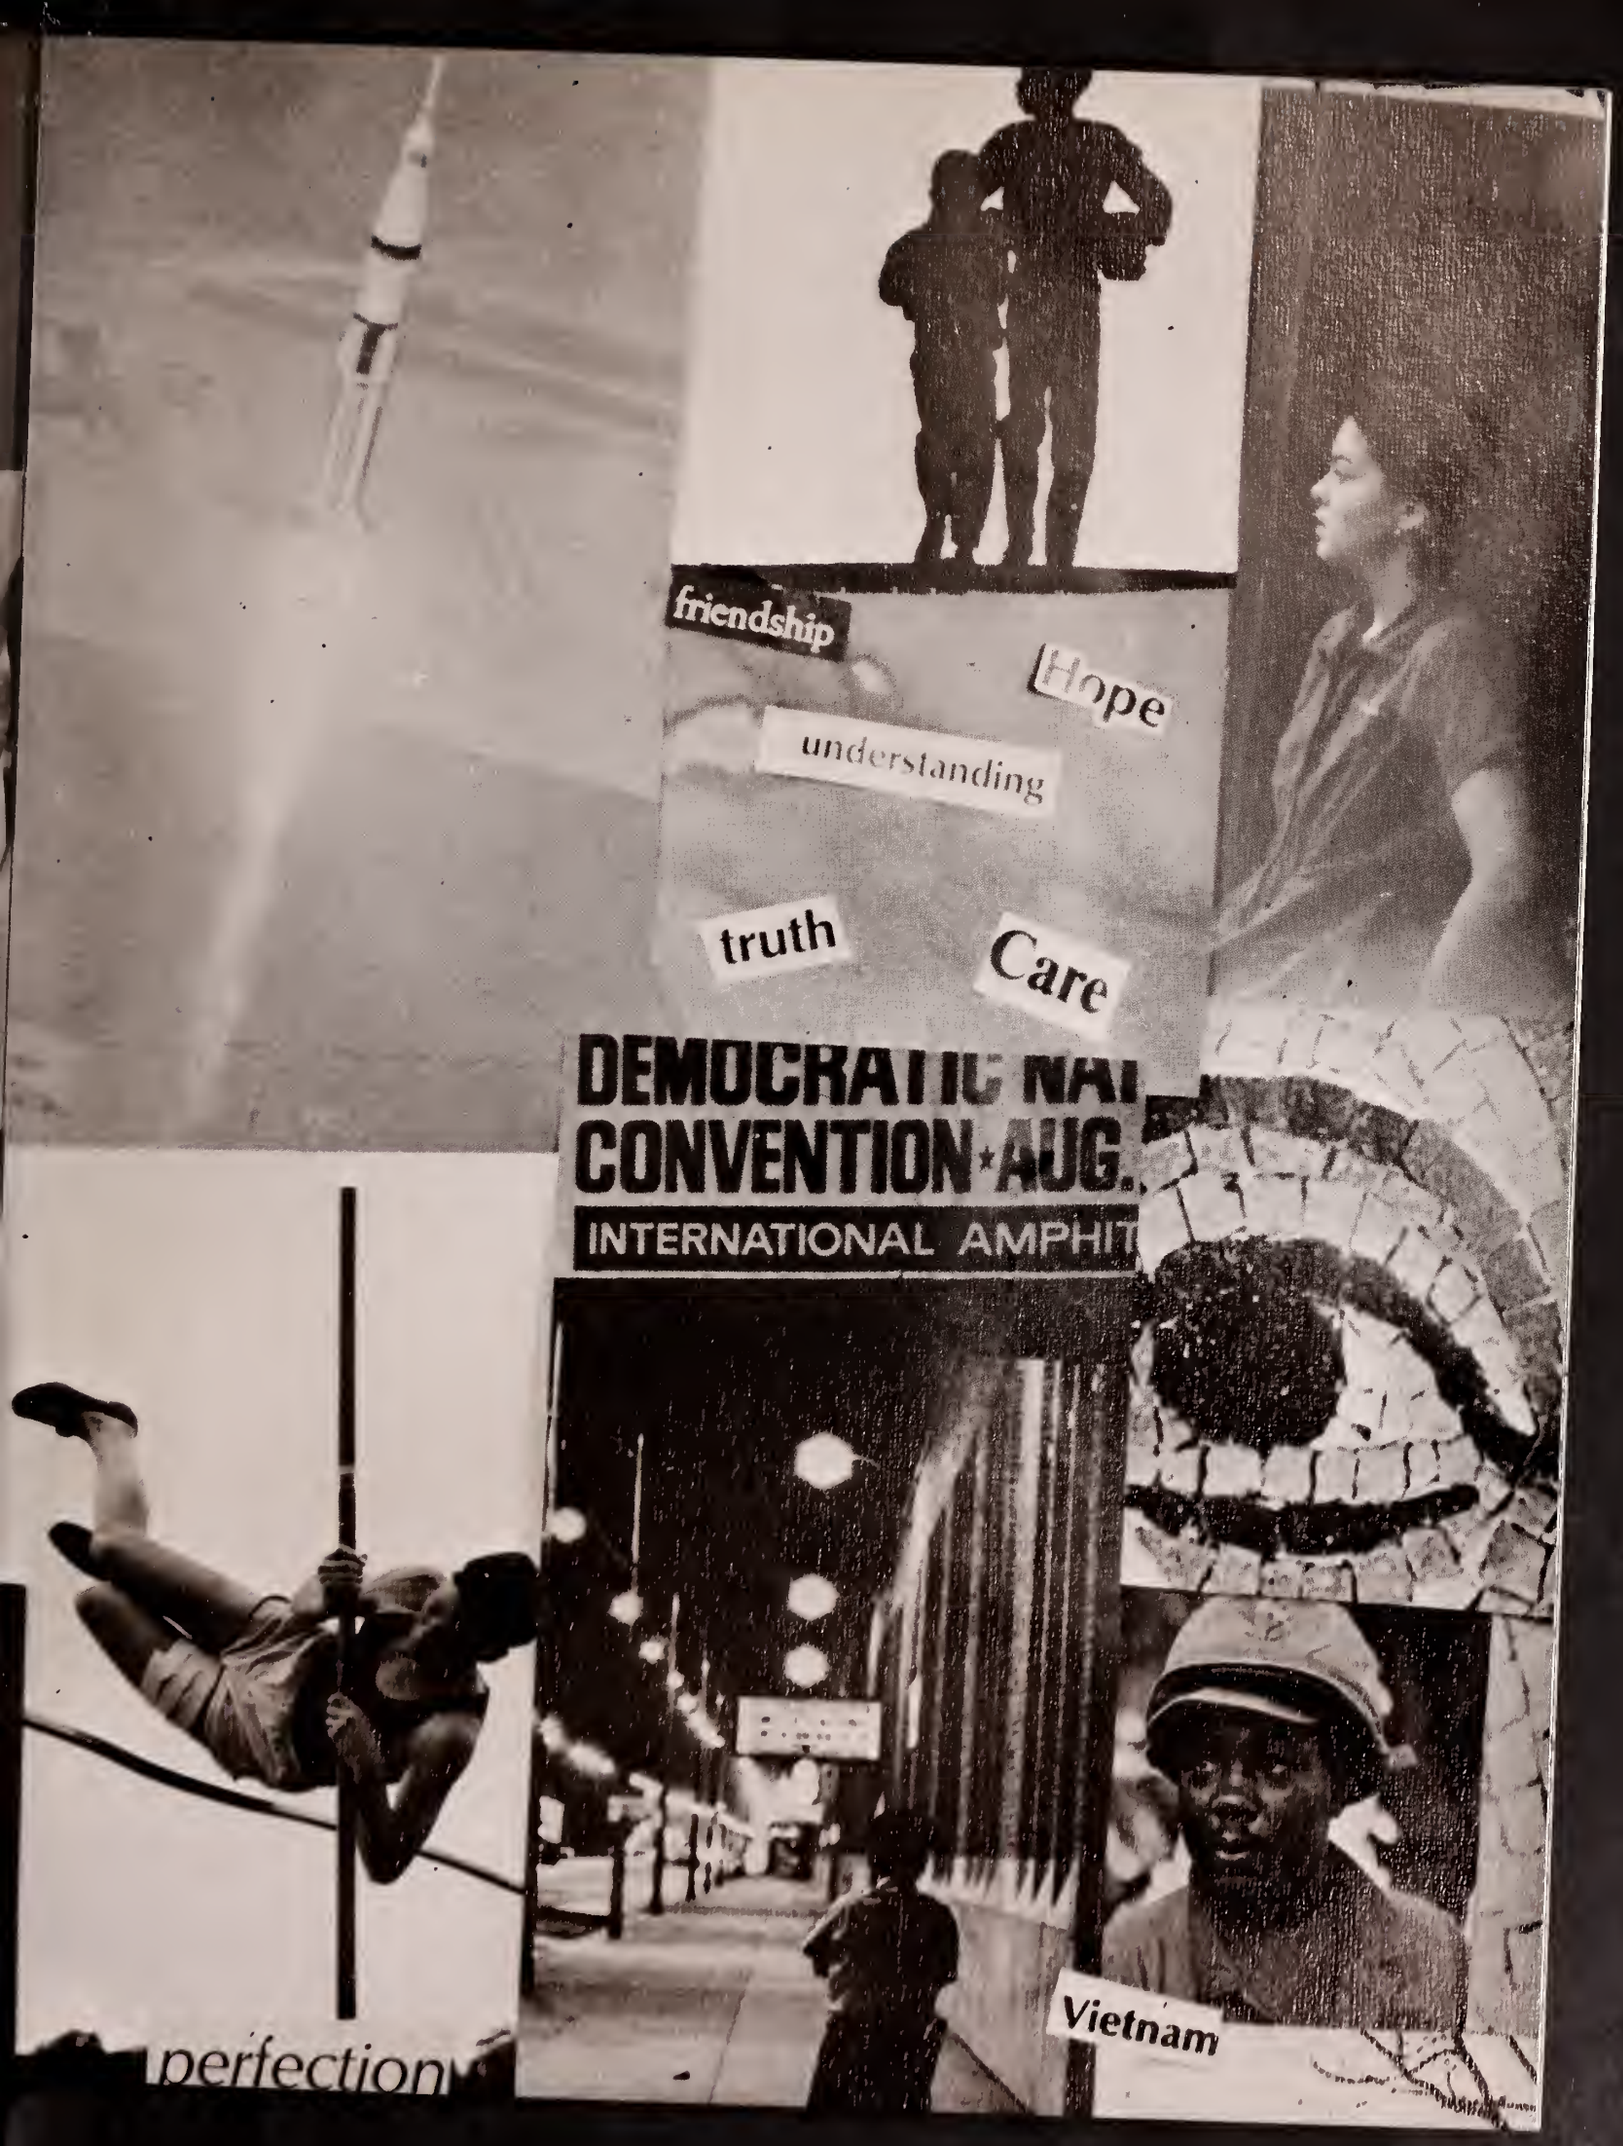

September 25, 1950—May 20, 1968

With deep-felt compassion for his family, we regret the passing of a classmate respected by all. If words can be of any comfort, perhaps we may reflect in the words of Ecclesiastes, "To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven; a time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted." Because of his unique combination of friendly enthusiasm and thoughtful sensitivity, Freddy will be remembered as a special member of our class.

Leadership of 1970

Mr. Bernard Welch, Advisor; Stephen Haschig, President.

Denis Fiorentino, Treasurer.

In conclusion, we have seen that our mosaic is significant not only as an individual composition, but also as one of the many elements contributing to the total view of our world culture. Upon realizing how we fit into the pattern of society, we now see that it is in a state of constant motion and change. To preserve the continuity of this pattern is the challenge facing the class of 1970. May each member of their class offer his intellect and his spirit to the artistie creation of the new mosaic. And may their year bring them reason for pride in their accomplishment.

Randell Kapitan, Vice President; Geraldine Patterson, Secretary.
